

EVENT SECURITY

ABOUT THE SERVICE

In the past year, extremist groups and lone radicals have focused their attention on soft targets where high impact attacks result in mass casualties; often achieved on a low budget using a low-tech solution. Any event which gathers a crowd is now a highly-prioritised risk for a government and one which sees advice being communicated frequently. To have an event without any security is unthinkable but just how effective is it?

Typically, an event organiser would sub-contract their security provision but require the provider to assure their own security. The provision of impartial, third party quality assurance supplies both the organiser and sub-contractor with peace of mind that security is effective, well planned and customer-friendly.

If your event involves the screening or searching of the public, staff, vehicles, service providers and their equipment, then Redline has the capability and experience to underwrite your security, providing near real-time reporting and comprehensive reports to support you.
